The train set

Lizzy, Joe and Troy are in the attic of their home in the UK.

The children's dad works downstairs in the family cake shop. There are never any customers in the shop.

We can play with this train set.

Look, there's a train station.

Dad, can we play with this?

My old train set? It's broken. You can throw it away.

And there are tracks.

In the garage, next to the shop, the children repair the train, clean the station and put down the tracks.

During their summer holiday, the three children build a landscape around the train set. They make roads and bridges. They make trees, fields and lakes. They make a model town, with shops and buildings. They make little people to put in the town. The train set grows and grows.

I'm making a road. What about you?

I'm making some shops.

I'm making some trees.

The children's train set is now a tourist attraction. People come to see the trains at the weekend. The children's dad is very happy because there are now lots of customers in his cake shop.

Answer the questions.

- 1 What do the children find in the attic?
- 2 Why is the children's dad happy?
- 3 Why do you think it's good to reuse old things?
